AGRICULTURE IN THE SCHOOLS

In all countries the subject of agriculture has been comparatively slow in taking its place amongst the subjects of the school. In Ontario there has never been a period since the establishment of our educational system in 1847, that efforts have not been made to introduce it into the schools—chiefly by means of text books.

In the introduction of Nature Study and School Gardening into the schools about the beginning of the century, a new method which everywhere promises good results has been discovered. Instead of learning facts from text books, the pupil and teacher now learn from Nature in a natural way, using books to enlarge their knowledge and direct their inquiries.

It is now being realized that Agriculture has rich educational values for every child and that these are not by any means limited to economic concerns. With a wider realization of this fact the subject is gradually winning its way into the rural and village schools of Ontario as the following lists will show.

By many it is thought, moreover, that through this work lies one of our best hopes for redirecting rural education and solving our rural problem.

Anyone interested in the plans of the Ontario Department of Education for promoting the teaching of Agriculture should read Circulars 13 and 13 (1).

In 1912 the regulations were amended providing for the payment of grants to teachers not specially trained at the Agricultural College. Grants were made available also to trustees and teachers where home-gardening work was taken as the practical basis for the instruction in Agriculture.

Emphasis was laid on the TEACHING OF AGRICULTURE rather than on conducting a school garden.

Notifications of intention of taking up the work were received from 123 schools in all, and reports were received at the close of the year from the 101 schools listed below.

Under the regulations governing the work the teacher completing the instruction of the fall term was not eligible for any grant unless he or she was the holder of the Elementary Certificate in Agriculture. Neither was the teacher taking the work up to midsummer only eligible for any grant unless certificated. This will explain why in some cases no grants are indicated for the teacher. In all cases, however, the teacher's reports on the instruction given had to be presented before the trustees were eligible for any grants; that is, the payment of grants to trustees was dependent on the giving of instruction by the teacher throughout the year.

Notifications of intention of taking up the work were received from 177 schools in all, and reports were received from the 159 schools listed below.

See note under 1912 for explanation of grants not being paid to teachers in some cases.

Under the revised regulations of 1914, grants will be paid for either part of the year's work by a teacher whether certificated or not, provided the work for the year is completed and reported upon.

The High School at Arthur, and the Continuation Schools at Exeter and Drayton qualified for grants also.

ONTARIO SCHOOLS TEACHING AGRICULTURE IN 1914

The lists given below show the schools from which notices have been received this year. (c) after the teacher's name means that he or she holds a certificate in Agriculture; (s) that he or she has attended one summer session at the O.A.C.; (s) after the name of the school indicates that the children's gardening is being carried on in a school garden; (h) that the practical work is carried on as a home-gardening scheme; (o) that the school has withdrawn from the work for 1914.

(S) before the number of the school denotes that the school is a Separate School. The figure after the Post Office marks the rural route.

The dates given show when official notification from trustees and teacher was received. As set forth in Regulation 4, page 5, Circular 13 (1913 edition) the work is accredited for grants for the portion of the year remaining after the receipt of the notice.

The High Schools in Essex, Arthur and Bowmanville, the Collegiate Institute at Vankleek Hill and the Continuation School at Drayton are taking up the work also. Other High Schools will likely commence the work in September.
